Reports of Great Damage Denied—Matters not Alarming.

BOSTON, July 21. The damage to New England by the present drought is now past recovery, whatever future weather may be. Some northern localities have been favored with showers during the past week, but most of the districts have been without rain sufficient for a growing season for weeks. Corn may be about so low land but still in fair condition, but potatoes are much injured except early plantings. Pastures are drying up, rapidly, early feeding of stock necessary. Streams are low and the beds of shallow creeks and lakes are dry. Grass is the only abundant crop and a large yield of excellent hay has been cut and secured. The second crop, however, is of little va, as, and will not be cut except on better lands.

BANK FILES MISSING.

Accountant Claims to Have Been Kidnapped—Business Mix.

The Bank Officials do not Believe the Story.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., July 21. When J. A. Walker, teller in the Bank of Nova Scotia, went in to the bank Saturday morning at 8.30 he found the door of the vault open and the accountant, Robert G. Sanders, lying on the floor unconscious. Four thousand dollars of the bank's funds were missing.

Sanders says should said that he went into the bank at 7.30 in the morning to get some money to pay his way to Canada, which James also, at 7.45. While in the vault he was knocked down and became unconscious. He did not see his assailants, his back being towards the outsides.

Sanders lets as two of Yarmouth, N. S., and is about 20 years old. He has been in the employ of the bank three or four years.

When Sanders was found the crystal of his watch was broken but he did not appear to be seriously injured.

Sanders has borne a good reputation but the bank officials are not satisfied with his story and he was committed to jail to await examination.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Protest by the New York Chamber of Commerce.

NEW YORK, July 21. A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held to-day to discuss an objectionable form of bills of lading adopted by the Central Traffic Association and about to be issued by the railroad companies. The chief points in making this form objectionable are that the bills are not negotiable and that the railroad companies assume no liability for loss or damage to goods. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the use of such bills of lading and inviting the officers of the Chamber to confer with other organizations in opposition and if necessary to join with them in petitioning Congress for the enactment of a law similar to that adopted by the English parliament in 1874 and now in force in England.

Particulars of the Fearful Disaster to Fort De France—Thousands Homeless.

LONDON, July 21. Mail advices from Martinique have been received giving full details of the disastrous fire that practically destroyed the town of Fort-de-France, burning at 19 houses being to death and rendering thousands of families homeless. The loss amounts to the value of $6,000,000, as 1,200 houses and all the principal public buildings are destroyed. In fact the town is reduced to ruins and the inhabitants are in a deplorable condition. Food is being sent to them from all parts of the West Indies.

GUATEMALA AND HONDURAS

Form an Alliance and Declare War Against San Salvador.

NEW YORK, July 21. A special from the City of Mexico states that Senor Pos, confidential agent of the provisional government of San Salvador, in an interview on the war between his country and Guatemala says that Nicaragua and Costa Rica will become allies of San Salvador from the fact that should San Salvador be worsted it would be advantageous to Guatemala and both the countries above named would be at the mercy of the conqueror.

Senor Pos received to-day, Sunday, a telegram from Gen. Barrios stating that an alliance had been formed between Guatemala and Honduras and that they had declared war against San Salvador. Gen. Barrios wires that and is marching toward the Guatemala capital, capturing every town in victorious road to it. Senor Pos says that General Barrios is prepared to meet any exigency, the passing the frontiers of Nicaragua and Costa Rica being entered against Guatemala and her ally.

Minister Dugres of Guatemala, denies the authority of the report of the battle between the troops of Guatemala and San Salvador. He says the only despatches received are from points in San Salvador where a great censorship is in force.

Besieged the Capital.

LONDON, July 21. The Guatemalan Minister to Paris received a despatch from his government to-day that statement published in the morning papers to the effect that hostilities have broken out between San Salvador and Guatemala. According to his advices, war has not been declared, nor has the San Salvador frontier been crossed. He says if any fighting has taken place it is most likely taken place in the interior of San Salvador between rival factions.

The city teams were all at work yesterday carting sand and gravel to Centre street, to be used in raising the grade in the middle of the street, where the street railway is laid. It will raise the grade in the centre about six or eight inches and give opportunity to the rain and melting snow, which have always made a sand hole there, to drain off. It will be an improvement that must be appreciated.

The contract for the work of cutting down the ledge on Chapel Hill has been awarded to Mr. John McPherson, of Bangor, he being the lowest bidder. Mr. McPherson had the contract to build the foundation for the new basement room and made a bid to cut down the hill for $300, which was accepted and work was commenced yesterday. It is expected to take about three weeks to finish the work.

The toll bridge terminus of the street railway has been reached by the track layers and there is now almost a continuous line of track from one end of the line to the other, the only break being the place on Cemetery hill where the roadbed is to be blasted from the ledge and where the track is to run over the trestle work and temporarily wait beyond. It is estimated that it will take about ten days longer to complete the trestle and some longer time will be occupied in blasting out the ledge on the hill. At the junction of the road and the Maine Central track there will have to be a double frog and this is now being made by the Maine Central and will be placed in position as soon as completed. This morning the track layers will turn their attention to the unlaid part of the road in front of the Dirigo mill, where the retaining wall has been built and this will be finished in a day or two. If nothing happens to prevent, clear may be run to South Brewer in about three weeks, but more than one car cannot be run before power is obtained from Veazie.

A curious strike has just ended in Danville, Va. Several days ago a butcher was imprisoned for violating a city ordinance, whereupon all the butchers closed their stalls and swore they would sell no more meats until the ordinance was changed. Since that time no fresh meat could be bought for love or money, and the people were put to great inconvenience. The butchers at last decided that they were gaining the worst of the so-called strike, and all will now open at the old stand.

A new colony of strange people are forming southeast of Pierre, S. D. They are under the leadership of a woman, and hold their property all in one common lot. The women is handsome and of commanding presence, and rules over the colony of about 200 in rather despotic manner. Their religion savors somewhat of the Mormon and the old Jewish religion, and on Saturday has they offered burnt offerings in the way of salves, etc. They positively refuse to allow strangers who will not live in one of them in their community, and all attempts to gain any information from them by the ordinary means have failed.

"Now, sir," began the attorney for the defense, knitting his brows and preparing to confuse the witness at his own pleasure to cross-examine, "you say your name is Williams. Can you prove that to be your real name? Is there anyone in the court room who can swear that you never assumed it for purposes of fraud and deceit?" "I think the can identify me yourself," answered the witness. "Why? Who do I know you better than anyone else?" "I paid that over over your signature twenty-five years ago, when you opened another set of teeth for me." exclaimed. "I'm the same Williams."

The Fashions.

[From the New York Evening Post.]

Sweet-pea blossoms, white and colored, real and artificial, are the popular decorative flowers of the moment.

Fine Irish point lace, in pure white and pale beige shades, is made use of for bonnets for evening dress, and is also much used on collar and gordon-party hats of Nonpareil straw.

Among the expensive waistcoats worn with cloth walking cloth blazers, are those of bright yellow faille striped with diagonal bands of black velvet, red Victoria silk models sprayed with very small white flowers, pale-green silk glacés shot with gold, and trimmed with fine gold galloons, and snow-white corded silk waistcoats in Louis XIV. style with silver buttons and delicate silver embroidery, or with handsome white enamel buttons with Rhinestone centres, the fronts, collar and pocket-flaps of pure white silk embroidery.

Ladies are wearing with their pretty outing costumes the long chamois gloves which protect the arms from the sun's rays, and which can be washed in light suds and made fresh and tidy in appearance. The white castile soap used is put in the water, and not rubbed directly on the gloves. Also for strong, serviceable wear are used the gloves of real Russia leather, which are sold in tan and other brown shades, including mahogany. These gloves are easily recognized by the unmistakable perfume which is always present with this particular make of leather, attributable to a certain kind of oil used in the tanning process.

A charming soiled, recently worn at a fashionable garden fete, was of white foulard, with a broad rose-pink stripe in it, and a delicate and beautifully shaded flowering of pink roses between stripes. The bodice had shoulder puffs and a yoke of strawberry silk, with high lace in points over the yoke. A Corday collar was trimmed with bands of fine gold passementerie, and from this collar fell a light jabot of the costly lace. A pointed girdle of the gold passementerie finished the bodice at the waist.

A Directoire coat to be worn in the room over skirts of very expensive black lace, is made of pale primrose-yellow silk, with a narrow stripe of butter-yellow satin in it. This opens over a full front of superb black silk net draped over plain yellow satin. At the lower edge of the vest are bows of black velvet ribbon. There is also a dark arrangement of net and velvet ribbon around the neck, and at the edge of the vandyked sleeves.

A dainty dancing-toilet has its polonaise rosy-violet skirt veiled with India silk gauze of a jasper tint braided with pale pink anemone blossoms. The muslin is draped in diagonal folds over a closely fitted cuirass lining of violet silk. The sleeves are short, forming a vandyked cap of the silk, with a puffing of the gauze. Delicate crepe de Chine and beautiful varieties of Venetian lace. There are pale-rose ribbons, nearly in tint, with stripes that show a combination of cotton creamy lace finishing and second-hand tinted panels of India silk, thus further introduced by bonnets of dazzling ribbon gauntlets in moire, faille, satin, or velvet.

Some of the French cotton goods this season have interesting Persian designs, which are not printed, but are woven in relief upon their delicate surface. A beautiful pattern shows small roses shading from a blush rose to a rich damask. Sateen has lost caste, but its tempting and novel colorings and devices have kept the fabric from becoming wholly unfashionable. The low price of foulards and other pretty dress fabrics has greatly hurt the sale of the heavier cotton stuffs. Some of the best designs are more than ever wonderful reproductions of India and China silk devices.

STATE NEWS.

Aroostook.

This is the kind of farms they carry on in Aroostook: J. F. Long of Presque Isle has 28 acres of potatoes in one field, also a patch of 5000 cabbages, not to mention other crops and an orchard of 1400 trees. No wonder that county is making such rapid strides in wealth and population.

They are telling some pretty tough stories about the Aroostook hay crop, the last one being the tale that a Houlton man had to mow a grass with a cross-cut saw.

Somerset.

Buried among the Dam stalls at Sandy's Harbor, the Pejepscot Historical Society found some rare and curious specimens of prehistoric times. Bones of the deer, porpoise, bears, fox, woodchuck and some smaller carnivorous animals, birds of several kinds, including a well-preserved specimen of the wing-bone of the Great Auk, now wholly extinct, were picked up. Fragments of pottery were numerous as well as chips of stone broken off in the manufacture of stone implements. Of implements, half a dozen perfect and some broken ones were discovered, including a war-point and an interesting curved cutting-knife. Only one piece of worked bone occurred, a broken awl.

A queer history attached to a Portland young woman. When but five years old, she was sold by her own people, who are gypsies, to a Portland fish peddler, and the latter firmly believed that she was bought to beggar or steal. She's been educated and treated kindly, and earns her living as a servant in the captain's family, pedaling every day, no doubt, how much better to be to eat than to be eaten.

Mr. Gilbert Fowler, the Portland horseman, returned from Syracuse, Thursday where he has been with his trotter, General Stark. On his return he stopped in the car with the horse, and while the train was making a steep grade the car was entered by two ruffians, who beat Mr. Fowler with sand-bags until he was insensible and robbed him of his money.

Brunswick and Harpswell are said to be the only two places in the State where laurel can be found.

Sagadoc.

Dr H. C. Vaughan, of Lawrence, Kan., formerly of Ellsworth, who is visiting his old home, says that Maine people know nothing of hot weather compared with Kansas.

Now that Mt. Desert has become one of the most rampant summer resorts on this continent it might be supposed that its inhabitants would just enough gained any encouragement upon the natural beauties of the region, but, according to a correspondent of the Mount Desert Herald, they are selling to sell their birthright for a few days' wages. Mr. R. L. Rogers of Boston, protests vigorously against the destruction of the timber on the slope of Western Mountain, a giant saw-mill having been erected in that vicinity lately. He says this forest is the one great attraction of Seal Cove and its destruction destroys any chance of Seal Cove to become a summer resort for years at least, and that the people feel bad about losing it, but don't like to say much because they hope to get employment either in the woods or at the saw-mill.

Kennebec.

The scheme to revive steamboat communication between Waterville and Gardiner, after a lapse of thirty years, occasions a diversity of opinion as to its practicability. On account of the troublesome shoals, but nobody in Augusta is disposed to throw cold water on it, as has been given out. On the contrary, everybody, so far as heard from, wishes success to the enterprise and a congressional appropriation to dredge the river. The prevailing notion is that navigation above the dam cannot be successfully accomplished until the river has been properly dredged. Where the little steamer got aground the other day there was once thirteen feet of water; now there are only three feet at high tide. The Kennebec Log Driving Company has already expended, it is understood, $8,000 in trying to prevent the logs from interfering with the sailing of the steamer, which is as much as she cost, and this is but a small part of what will have to be expended to keep the river free from obstructions.

Knox.

It is nothing unusual for a man to pay his tax by work on the roads, but the way Mr. Edwin McIntyre of Warren works out his tax is a little out of the common course. The Thomaston Herald says Mr McIntyre goes over the piece of road he cares for at regular intervals and picks up every rock. He collects them in a wheelbarrow, takes them home, pulverizes them on a stone crusher and keeps them back into the road again. This practice he has kept up for thirteen years. During that time he has ground and put into the road 15 cords of rocks. McIntyre not only measures them, but the last two years he has counted them. He found, by actual count that last year, he used in this way just 67,604 cobble stones and thus far this year 30,000. It is needless to remark that this is one of the best pieces of road in the town.

Oxford.

We probably shan't hear of many more cases of lonesomeness in Oxford county, right away. The impressment of that Strong is a good thing for the whole State. Too often, the result of this variety escapes and a shameless specimen of crime is thus encouraged.

Piscataquis.

Up in Piscataquis county, in the town of Sangerville, there lives one of the smartest and most enjoyable old gentlemen that can be found in New England, says a member of the editorial staff of the Fairfield Journal, who has been making a trip in that county. His name is Moses Carr, he is eighty-one years old and the largest owner and president of two of Maine's woolen mills. He is an active business man and owns and superintends several farms in the country often working on them a whole day at a time. For polyglot handling his age, he can do more work to-day than the average man at fifty years of age. He is very temperate and so he also says he believes he is good for a hundred. He is one of the most successful farmers to be found. Having started without a dollar, he has piled the thousands high and has made all of his children rich, besides helping many a poor boy to start in the world. If the count of 1840 had counted more heifer like this one the return of 1890 would be handsomer than they are.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet thoroughly. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me more good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, so much I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, just tiring. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. My appetite began to come back, and I gained in flesh. I have taken three bottles, and I feel as well as I ever did in my life. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who suffer as I did.

The Commercial fears to inform its readers in what particular Tom Winn had misrepresented the workings of the license law in Philadelphia. The reason for this is perfectly obvious and shows how hard pressed our contemporary was for an argument when it was found to resort to the plug-ugly tactics that adorned its columns on Saturday.

Robert Johnson, of Richmond, is another prominent Southern colored man who opposes the force bill. He says it would cause a revival of the bitterness against the negro, which has almost died out. He carries a level head.—Boston Globe.

The Democratic organs have to be satisfied with mighty small pickings. When an application representing the colored men of the South issues an address urging the Senate to pass the National Election bill such a paragraph as that quoted above is simply ridiculous.

The Commercial has yet to learn that blister and billingsgate will not change facts. It has invariably opposed any enforcement of the law against the saloons and we have forced it to admit then early in the campaign that it will continue this shameless course no matter how strongly the people indorse prohibition at the polls. The appeals of such an organ will not have much weight with the voters and it is not surprising to find some of the principal party papers in its own section of the State refusing to follow its leadership. Such sentiments as these also furnish an additional explanation of the fact that the original Democratic convention emphatically refused to heed the demand of the Commercial. Even its own party when fairly represented realized the danger so result from its leadership and it was only when that rump convention with its 250 votes got together that it succeeded in forcing its license campaign upon the party. The people must of necessity determine the kind of law they want and the paper which thus blatantly admits that unless the people accept its views it will refuse to accede to their decision the request that is the nish a weakest, will not prove a brilliant leader.

An intelligent person, certainly no intelligent candidate of a newspaper, can fail to be aware that public sentiment in this state is favor of a change in the present system of dealing with the liquor traffic has developed immensely since the Democratic party presented to the people the first opportunity of expressing their views on the subject by their ballots.—Commercial.

The evidence of this wonderful change seems to be confined to the unsubstantiated assertion of the Commercial, whose claim to party leadership is based on 250 votes in that rump convention. With such Democratic papers as the Machias Union informing this would-be boss that after the campaign the men who voted against the license plank will be in a position to remark "I told you so," our contemporary will have hard work to convince the people that there has been any change of sentiment in Maine on the prohibitory question. Up to date the only effect of the action of the rump convention is to demonstrate that it does not even have the support of the Democratic party. Gov. Burleigh will be handsomely elected in September and will have a Republican Legislature behind him.

The Washington correspondent of the Portland Press writes: "The question over the Maine position on the board of managers of the Soldiers' Home came up again Saturday in the Senate when a clause was incorporated in the sundry civil appropriation bill making actual men the placers on the board. Among those named was that of Gen. T. W. Hyde, of Bath. This is the appearance in another form of the controversy between the House and Senate as to whether Col. A. R. Fairbanks, of Bangor, or Gen. Hyde shall be appointed from Maine. It will be remembered that some time ago the House Military Committee, as is the custom, nominated members of this board and the House passed the resolution of nominations. Col. Fairbanks was made the member from Maine because the Military Committee felt that a purely honorary position like this should be passed around among the old soldiers. General Hyde had the place for six years and no disrespect was intended for him as he is everywhere regarded as a gallant officer, but some of Gen. Hyde's friends wished him to have the place for another six years so when the resolution went to the Senate that body substituted his name for Fairbanks. The House thought this unreasonable and disagreed to the matter went into conference between the two Houses, where it is now in the hands of a conference committee. But evidently fearing that the House would not consent to have its nominee put aside in this way, the Senate have endeavored to get around the conference already entering by inflexible resolutions on to the sundry civil bill. It is difficult to see how anything can be gained by this if the Senate persists in its action, as it probably will that the Democrats will make large Congressional gains in the Northwest; this fall on the tariff question. There has never been a campaign, we believe, where the Democrats did not make heavy gains at this stage of the proceedings. Two years ago Bliss, Vilas, Dickinson and a host of lesser lights had the entire Northwest solid for the Democratic ticket. The result showed the absurdity of their claim, but they are going through the same performance this year. It is a regular part of the Democratic programme to claim everything in advance, but Mr. Mills' talk deceives no one.

The Portland Press says: THE WINN question suggests that some good may come out of the manufacture question. The opponents of prohibition have oft and for years that there was very little public sentiment behind it, and some of them, notably the Bangor Commercial, have made this an excuse for openly opposing the enforcement of the law. Now if the resubmission programme is overwhelmingly defeated, and it is thereby shown that there is a very strong public sentiment behind the prohibitory law, this excuse will vanish, and the Commercial will have to support the enforcement of the law, or if it continues to oppose, to do so without any plausible excuse.

Bound to Violate the Law.

The fact that the license law is persistently violated in the large cities is the license states, just as the prohibitory law is violated in large cities in prohibition states is a troublesome phase of the case, often now under consideration for our contemporary to meet. It turns and twists in the painful manner, one day declaring the statement is "true" and the next attempting a lame defense of the license law. The one fact perfectly plain to everyone and practically though unfortunately admitted by the Commercial, is that any law that attempts to restrict the liquor traffic is bound to be violated. In this connection we quote from the Philadelphia Press, a staunch advocate of the license system and hence cannot be accused of an unfair statement.

The quart-mug saloons are such palpable frauds that their proprietors find they have no standing in court. No judge will listen for a moment to such a palpable evasion of the law as is involved in the new trick of selling a quart of beer to two or three persons, to be drunk by them collectively, the proprietor having nothing but a wholesale license. Fantastic tricks have been PLAYED SUCCESSFULLY with our license laws, for such a transparent shift as this will not go double.

Here we have a frank statement that the law has been successfully evaded, but if one were to accept the general argument of the Commercial he would infer that it is only the prohibitory law that is violated by the remedies. The talk about "unreasonable restriction" is a farce as shown by the figures. A city that has 125 licensed saloons in one ward, 96 in another, 60 in still another, making 281 saloons in these three wards and so on through the city cannot be said to impose very severe restriction upon the thirsty. Whatever that may be that is the law enacted by the people, and the Commercial denounces very well applaud their wisdom in one line and question it in the next. Nebraska is successfully maintaining that state indorsement by the people of Pennsylvania of the license system spoke how matters with its peculiar significance, while the indorsement by the people of Maine of the prohibitory law counts for nothing. The fact is the Maine vote is the more significant of the two as Maine has tried license and abandoned it for prohibition. The people will again indorse it in September.

Bourbon Buster.

The announcement published in another column that a leading Southern paper urge its people to declare a boycott against Northern business firms unless the Election law is abandoned, will tend directly to strengthen public sentiment in favor of this legislation. It is the same kind of talk heard in the days of slavery and indicates the determination of the Southern Bourbons to bulldoze the people into allowing the perpetuation of the frauds upon which the Solid South is founded. That style of argument will not work. The very fact that the South is to-day protesting against a non-partisan supervision of Congressional elections, is the strongest possible evidence of the retrogrent of the whole political fabric in that section of the country. This is not a political question alone, but a business question in the broadest sense of the word. The financial vote from the South is a constant menace to the legislation of the country. If there is a dangerous measure pending affecting the business interests of the country that vote is always found behind it. The people at the election of 1888 overwhelmingly repudiated that infamous measure known as the Mills bill. It was a pernicious bill and it meant disaster to the country. So well was this fact understood that a Democratic President and a Democratic House were thrown over because both stood committed to that policy. The Mills bill passed a Democratic House by a majority of thirteen votes, ten of which came from the State of Georgia where elections are such a farce that these ten men were returned on a total vote of only 27,000. The Bourbon organ published in that state, which attempts to alarm the business interests by a silly threat of a boycott, knows with of the work. The South would very quickly tire of that sort of thing, especially as it now has its agents out inviting the investment of Northern capital to develop her resources. The sensible men of the South will deprecate such idle Bourbon bluster.

Another Chance for Revenue.

Mr. Editor: Please give a subscriber room in your columns for the following suggestion: By the carnival of our State of thefts and robberies have ever been absolutely prohibited under severe penalties, but still these crimes are constantly being committed in all parts of the state. The suggestion which I would make is this, that inasmuch as the law prohibiting these crimes has been but partially effective, the prohibition should be repealed and a high license law enacted in its place, so that the State shall enjoy an income from the business, whereas now the law is one of much expense, and no profit.

A Policy in the Insurance.

The Insurance of life insurance is to all those who have children, inasmuch upon them it matters not that it would seem to relate to adults in the ordinary sense, yet it is equally true that the child is the father of the man, and the policy taken out on the life of the child may be made to mature when the child reaches manhood, leaving the policy in force for the benefit of the man, or, if the child dies, the money may be paid to the parents, who may also have thereby insured for life, and have had the benefit of carrying the policy, thus so insured, in the shape of the medical certificate. The investment has been cheap, and if at the end of any term of years, during which the child survives, the policy matures, it will certainly be found to be a good investment. Expensive there is found to be no policy so cheap as life insurance, and nothing but life insurance. Keep in mind

FROM WASHINGTON.

News About the Capitol.

Relations With Canada.

WASHINGTON, July 21. Mr. Hoar, chairman of the Senate committee on relations of commerce and business with Canada, presented to the Senate to-day the testimony which had been taken by that committee. This testimony was not accompanied by a report. It is understood the committee will make a report of its conclusions at a later period after additional testimony shall have been taken at Detroit, Buffalo and some other points.

The Testimony

consists of testimony of military men, officials, prominent business men of the United States and Canada, men engaged in the fishing industry and from along the whole extent of our northern boundary from California to Maine. The testimony covers all points of vital interest as to the relations between the United States and the dependencies of Great Britain in North America. The first witness examined was General Nelson A. Miles, in command on the Pacific coast, who, in commenting upon the defenseless condition of the United States upon our northwestern border, said: "I believe the railway system of British Columbia could be occupied by American troops, not, however, through Victoria. That is on the island of Vancouver and occupied by the place where the British government has expended millions of dollars in building dry docks and navy yards and had made some surveys for fortifications. They have there at this time a fleet of war ships, under command of a British Admiral. I think it fair to say that during ten days the British fleet could destroy every town and city on Puget Sound, destroy our railroad, stop there, occupy our outlets for that northwestern country and could also land and shape up the Columbia river and destroy Portland and that railway system. There is not a gun of nor a single artillery soldier There are a few obsolete guns at the mouth of the Columbia at Fort Canby, that is not now occupied by troops. That is the condition of affairs north of the harbor of San Francisco, south of the harbor of San Francisco there is not a gun in position, a round of ammunition, nor a single artillery soldier to defend the harbors and cities of San Diego, Santa Barbara and San Pedro. From those points a small force could destroy the railway systems in Southern California."

British Forces.

CONGRESS OF AL.

The Tariff Bill Before the Senate.

Mr. Voorhees is a Free Trader Now.

The House will Vote on the Original Package Bill To-day.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, July 21 On motion of Mr. Hoar the Senate Committee on Relations with Canada was authorized to continue the investigations during the coming recess and report at the next session.

Mr. Gray made a motion to proceed to the consideration of the House bill to transfer the revenue marine service from the Treasury to the Navy Department. Agreed to. Mr. Frye was one of the eleven Republicans to vote yes.

The bill having been read, Mr. Gray moved to change the date for the appointment of revenue marine officers to be officers of the navy from July 1st, 1890 to October 1st, 1890.

Mr Allison suggested that the date should be postponed until January 1st, 1891, when the senate would be in session to confirm appointments.

Mr Gray accepted the suggestions and the date was fixed at January 1st, 1891.

Mr. Sherman opposed the bill as one of the worst measures before the Senate in many years. It would destroy the service organized for a hundred years; it would reverse the decisions of at least half a dozen Congresses, would disarrange revenue marine so that practically it would be of no service to the collections of customs revenue. The only object of the bill was to advance the pay of the officers in the bureau of $15,000 a year and those who constituted to be placed on the retired list.

Mr. Spooner advocated the bill, which was still being discussed, when at 6 o'clock it was laid aside without notice.

The Tariff bill was taken up.

Mr. Voorhees addressed the Senate in opposition to the bill which he characterized as a financial monster, every clause and touch of which was carefully inspected at the lobbies and found sound and reliable. It was only in an impure political and moral atmosphere generated by the current monopoly of wealth, that a financial measure like the one now pending would dare to show the hard outlines of its guilty face, much less would it expect to be treated with respect, spoken well of and passed as a law.

Mr. Voorhees spoke of it as an astounding fact that in the fourteen schedules of dutiable articles, the only reductions made were in the schedule relating to sugar and molasses, which in the light of the proposed security to sugar planters who not reduced at all, and in the section in relation to wines, spirits and other beverages. In every one of the twelve schedules the tariff taxes are increased. In regard to woolen goods that increase amounted to $1,500 000 a year

There are no pretensions, Mr. Voorhees said, that the increase was made on the score of revenue. It was simply the instance of protection run mad and developed into a Chinese wall of protection. Mr. Voorhees passed on to a discussion of the proposed increase of 120 per cent on tin plate in order to protect an infant industry as yet unborn, and in order to give employment to 24 000 workingmen now idle. It would be far cheaper, he said, for the country to pay $4,000 a year for their average wages, than to tax every inmate of the roof, every dinner pail, the pot and mug and simply to build up half a dozen millionaires and enable them to give coaching parties to protection leaders and formal dinners to the savages of 13 per cent. reduced on of the wages of these workingmen The plate, he said had the MKinley right to be on the free list and he would, at the proper time, move to put it there. There is no manufacturer of it in this country, therefore there is nothing to protect even if protection were right. It was a material in universal use and a common want with laboring people and ought, therefore, to pay no tax.

Might he not with propriety in leaving the tin plate schedule, call on all men and women who use tin pans, pails, cups, strainers, teapots, coffee pots, milk boxes, cooking pans, pie plates, cake tins for fruits and vegetables, and to forbearing women, to join in protecting against the free lists. Mr. Voorhees spoke at considerable length.

When he had finished Mr. Cockrell offered a resolution, which was agreed to, expressing the senate's regret at the announcement of the death of Representative Walker, of Missouri, and for the appointment of a committee of three Senators to attend the funeral.

Messrs. Vest, Plumb and Berry were appointed.

The Senate, as a further mark of respect, adjourned.

Mr. Payson, of Illinois, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Interior for information regarding the issue of patents to the Union Pacific Railroad Company for certain lands granted that Company, adopted.

By unanimous consent it was ordered that a vote on the original package bill shall be taken to-morrow, and a vote on the bankruptcy bill Thursday morning.

Resolutions were successively adopted expressive of the sorrow with which the House had heard of the death of Mr. Walker and providing for the appointment of a committee of seven members of the House and three members of the Senate to take orders for the funeral ceremonies.

At 12 15, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the House adjourned

A EXCITI G RACE.

Gaudaur and McKay Win the Professional Race at Duluth.

DULUTH, Minn., July 21. After the Jubilee events of to-day's regatta, the great professional race for prizes of $2,000, $500 and $300 took place. Gaudaur and McKay were nearest the starter, Teemer and Hosmer next, Hanlan and Wise next, and Hanna and Ten Eyck last. When the shot was fired all the crews dipped their oars in the water as if they were one man. In an instant Gaudaur and McKay forged ahead of Teemer and Hosmer, a quarter, half, and full length. From the start the struggle was most exciting. The crews followed each other quite closely in their order from the shore. Gaudaur and McKay were to the minute, Teemer and Hosmer forty-one, Hanlan and Wise thirty-six, and Hanna and Ten Eyck thirty-seven. The turn was made by Gaudaur and McKay. A second later Hosmer and Teemer followed, then Hanna and Ten Eyck and finally Hanlan and Wise. Half way to the finish the press boat was passed, where Gaudaur and McKay led Hosmer and Teemer three lengths The latter kept three-fourths of a length ahead of Hanna and Ten Eyck who kept the same distance ahead of the Toronto crew. Gaudaur's crew about four lengths ahead. The efforts of the last two crews to pass Hosmer were unavailing. There was a quarter length between Teemer and Hanna and between Hanna and Hanlan at the finish. Hanlan would very doubtless have had his best foot forward for a second a few hundred yards from the finish.

Time: Gaudaur and McKay 13 26; Teemer and Hosmer 13 32; Hanna and Ten Eyck 13 33½; Hanlan and Wise 13.34. Hanna and Ten Eyck, according to Teemer and Hosmer, turned the former over a buoy and Teemer entered a protest.

and in so doing caused the death of the men. The jury further censured the Union Steamboat Company to which the Tioga belonged, for carelessness in receiving freight which might be dangerous, without first inspecting the cases. They also recommend that the city oil inspector of this city have his duties so enlarged as to enable him to apprehend persons shipping explosive oils against the laws of the United States.

A war veteran who was lookin g yesterday at the Forepaugh circus bills displayed on the bill boards, representing the famous ride of Sheridan, criticized the knight rest much worn by the general, in that generals never wear red sashes, always pull our caps. On recommendation of Congressman Reed, Mr. H. H. Kemp, of Bangor, has been appointed superintendent of the construction of the public building there, proposals for the basement and foundation of which will be advertised, for bids week and he work will be pushed with all vigor.

Ground was broken yesterday on Baptist hill for the new electric light switching station to be erected there, and the foundation will soon be started. The building will be thirty-five feet square and two stories high. It is expected that the building will be completed in about a month. It is a necessity and will prove a great convenience.

NO ABANDONED FARMS THERE.—The assessors of the town of Caribou in their reply to Commissioner Matthew's circular regarding abandoned farms in the State, say "There are no abandoned farms in a town that has grained over 1,900 during the past ten years." Though the returns were but recently sent out, the replies are rapidly coming in and so far are very favorable.

It is said that the canker worm has made sad havoc with the forest trees at Mount Hill, which is in the town of Dunkeport, just across the line from Orland. The oak trees are stripped entirely of their leaves, and many acres look as though fire had been among them. The worms have now all disappeared; their life is a worm maggot about four weeks when they go into the ground, spin their cocoon, and in a few days appear as a full fledged moth

(Mr. John L. Stoddard, the well known lecturer, writes in a most enthusiastic way of the experience he is now undergoing in Norway. He has been riding across the country among the mountains and sailing among the famous fords, having, are this, reached and returned from the Nonth cape. Some of the scenery he declares surpasses in his long list of previous wonderful sights, and he finds constan. enjoyment in his studies of the Norwegian people. Evidently his travels in Scandinavia are to develop richly for his hearers of next winter.

The Leary raft so much written about attracts a good deal of attention from passengers on the Canso Bay steamer. It is by no means what due should expect. It shows but a few feet out of water, and is therefore much more dangerous to vessels crossing its path than it would be otherwise. With tugs perhaps three-eights of a mile ahead of its bow, even on a dark night it would be the most dangerous of the kind which crosses it, is another noticeable thing. Repairs are still going on, and when it will venture out is uncertain.

SCHOOL BOOKS. Agents were ending different school-book publishing houses are persistently pulsating the country in the interest of the house which they represent. There are no more direct returns, and its all appearance no more correct than those some men. And in this connection it may not be out of place to speak of the great advance that has been made in the character of school books generally within the last score of years. Of course some books have been published and are in extensively introduced which were not specially meritorious, to say the least, but all who have investigated the subject with any degree of thoroughness and impartiality, will not hesitate to say that the school books generally which are now issued by reliable houses are admirably adapted to the purposes for which they are intended.

NEW SUMMER SERVICE PLAN. A special train consisting of a locomotive, baggage car and five Pullman cars arrived in the city about 5 P. M., yesterday, on the way to Vermont City, Nova Scotia. On board was a party of gentlemen from Boston and New York, who were on a trip to the above named city for the purpose of making arrangements for a new steamer service between Liverpool and Vermont City, from which cars would be taken for New York. It is thought that by this arrangement two days time would be saved. It would be quite a revolution in ocean steamship service, as the trip across the ocean could, it is believed by those who have the matter in hand, then be made in four days. It is reported that the projectors already have a steamer in the process of construction for the service.

AMUSING "JOE WATERBOOM." The rushing on Summer street and vicinity have been amused and frightened alike by the strange antics of a man who has repeated there about midnight and gone about the latest pouring in of the wildness, sometimes opening the blinds to do so. His motive has not thus far appeared to be robbery, as none of the houses have been entered, but it is thought he is one of the top-heavy social people. He has adjourned from Summer street only just prior to "roll in the morning." Inquiries at the police headquarters at the Water Street Station show that the man is not known to the police.

BANGOR CONCRETE TO BE USED. Bangor concrete is to be given a trial at Rockland. Many of the wooden sidewalks which are to use at that city are to be torn up and concrete laid in place of the wood. The city government has contracted with Mr. Dunty, of this city, to lay 2,000 yards of concrete, and he will begin the work before long. It will doubtless be a great improvement to the city, both in appearance and usefulness. Many of the sidewalks in this city are of concrete, which makes a hard, solid and even walk, when a sufficient thickness of concrete is applied. It will be given a good trial in Rockland. Quite an amount of paving will also be done this year in that city.

FRIEND-WILSON. Cards have been received in this city announcing the marriage on the 16th inst., of Mr. Frank R. Friend, of Anamosa, Iowa, and Miss Grace A. Wilson, of Sedgwick, at the home of the latter. The bride is an accomplished young lady of remarkable sweetness of disposition and was much loved among her associates and friends, of whom she had many, not only in her native town but also in this city. She is the daughter of the late Captain Wilson, of Sedgwick. The groom is one of Anamosa's youngest business men, having come there from New England several years ago. The happy couple left at once for Anamosa, visiting Niagara Falls on the way, followed by the good wishes of a host of friends who can but feel that their loss is Anamosa's gain. They were the recipients of some very handsome presents as a testimony of the regard and affection in which they are held by their friends.

THE NEW STEAMBOAT ENTERPRISE. Mr. Hutson and his associates, owners of the steamer City of Waterville, built in Brewer, are by no means discouraged by the difficulties met by the boat on her trial trip, but are as enthusiastic as ever that the boat will both run and pay well. A crew of men is now busy determining and marking the channel, and it is believed by those who are best acquainted with the river, that when the wheels of the new boat are again started, the trip will be made in a manner satisfactory to her owners and the traveling public. If the enterprise does succeed it will mean a great increase in Waterville's prosperity. The report that the Kennebec Log Driving Co. has purchased the steamer City of Waterville rather than pay as much as would be necessary to keep the channel open for the passage of the steamer is pronounced by one of the directors of the Log Driving Company a falsehood, saying that such a transaction would only encourage other concerns to build boats to be sold to the company for a large bonus.

REUNION OF THE SEVENTH MAINE BATTERY ASSOCIATION. The following circular is being sent out by Secretary A. B. Merrill to the comrades of the Seventh Maine Battery Association: "The annual reunion of the 'Old Boys' of the Seventh Maine Battery will be held in Boston August 12-16, with headquarters at 71 Kilby street. Comrades James S Lowell, Frederick C. Fuller and Charles C. Dalton, the committee of arrangements, will be at headquarters Tuesday, August 12, at 8 a. m., to meet the boys, give directions, information, etc. The business meeting will be held the first day of the encampment if possible. We hope to see a good gathering of the Seventh Maine Battery boys and the largest reunion ever held in New England. All members of the battery who have not sent their personal sketches for our history to Comrade A. S. Twitchell, of Gorham, N. H., must do so before our meeting in Boston, or it will be too late; as he cannot wait longer than that time, and it is important that all who can should furnish their pictures as it will add much to the work."

The G. A. R. Encouragement.

The work of preparing for the friendly invasion of Boston next month by the comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic is being pushed day and night. The headquarters of the various committees having the arrangements in charge are all business from Monday morning to Saturday night, and even into the Sabbath day. The different measures to be carried out are now well in hand, and there is not the slightest danger that when the guests arrive they will not find the preparations complete. As the time approaches, the fact that an enormous crowd is to be there is more and more apparent. The committee on accommodations had thought that 20,000 mattresses would be quite enough to accommodate all visiting comrades, but at its meeting to-morrow an order will be posted adding 5,000 more to the first estimate. At a meeting of the executive committee held Saturday it was voted that the President of the United States be asked to grant a special leave of absence, with pay, from Aug. 11 to Aug. 17, inclusive, to all veteran soldiers and sailors employed in the various department of government who desire to attend the national encampment of the G. A. R. for 1890.

The committee on accommodations has furnished quarters during the past week to the following Maine posts:

Chaplin Post, 73, Lewiston, Mechanics' building, 15 men.

Bradbury Post, 18, Machias, Mechanics' building, 30 men.

Kaiser Post, 135, Waldoboro, Mechanics' building, 25 men.

Pratt Post, 30, Fairfield, Mechanics' building, 25 men.

Farragut Post, 27, Bridgton, Mechanics' building, 30 men.

The committee on parade has contracted for a liberal supply of spring water, to be distributed along the line of the great parade. The water will be furnished from regular water wagons and will at all times be subject to the demands of the veterans.

Although permission has been granted for carriages containing disabled veterans to appear in the parade, such carriages will be provided by posts and departments and not by the executive committee.

Owing to previous announcements it has been found impossible to secure Faneuil Hall for Wednesday morning, August 13 and it was voted not to hold the opening session of the encampment in that historic hall.

In answer to many inquiries, it may be well to say, once more, that disabled soldiers are to be allowed to ride in the grand procession. A division of carriages will be formed directly in the rear of the Massachusetts department. Posts or departments having disabled comrades must however furnish the necessary transportation.

Department headquarters, Grand Army of the Republic for Maine, is located in Portland. Rooms have been engaged in the new Bosworth Post building, when completed. The Women's State Relief Corps new badges will be worn for the first time at the National Encampment at Boston. Bosworth Post has voted to allow members, or friends of members, to put memorial windows in the new building. Maine headquarters at the Westbrook Th.

NON-PARTISAN TEMPERANCE WORK.

An Effective Presentation of the Subject by Miss Anna M. Edwards Monday Evening.

The address last evening at the Bonn street Free Baptist church by Miss Anna M. Edwards of Cleveland, Ohio, who spoke upon the non-partisan temperance work, was well directed, and the able manner in which the subject was treated was a source of much interest and profitable information to all who heard the address.

Miss Edwards began her address by telling of the degraded position which women occupied in the early ages when at Rome they had no legal existence whatever, and then contrasted that state of being with the present position occupied by women who are not now the slaves and inferiors, but rather the companions of and co-laborers with men. The formation of the Women's Board of Missions, twenty years ago, the Women's Christian Association and the Women's Christian Temperance Union were then alluded to, and the National Liquor Dealer's Protective Association, an organization formed for the safety of the rum traffic as against the work of the women in the temperance cause. The liquor, was an organization called into being by the crusade of the women against the rum traffic and its existence showed the fear of the rum seller that his business was to be ruined by the organized effort against it.

The speaker said that the non-partisan workers believed that public sentiment should be aroused and that this should be done, not as a political party movement, but as a moral action. If the movement is confined to one political party the other parties are at once antagonized and many enemies to the temperance cause are made. To destroy a great political party is a peculiar and tremendous task and as long as women have no ballot it is useless for them to attempt it.

The non-partisan workers think that the best way is not to attack any political party, but to call the attention of the men members of all parties, to the baneful effects of strong drink, and they look upon it with hate. When that condition is reached, then has come the beginning of the end.

Whatever disagreements there may be in regard to the temperance cause it must that temperance is not desired, but it is a difference of opinion concerning the method to be used. If by being antagonized men become alienated, nothing has been gained, and the non-partisan workers think it impossible to make war upon those who, members of different parties, are friends of prohibition.

A great deal has been done for prohibition in the last ten years, and the work is going steadily on, although there have been differences of opinion as to the manner of labor. This is not to be wondered at as each conscientious person, thinks for himself or herself, and it is impossible for all to come to the same conclusions. Some think they should ally themselves to the party bearing the name of the principle they advocate, but others take the ground that union with any single party means disaster to the temperance cause. All women were invited to the work where the Women's Christian Union was independent of party, but when in 98 at the convention as if outside the Union vote to go over to one party, then came a division.

Men were heard to speak of the injustice and ingratitude of the action and they were men who believed in temperance, and stood up for the right By this movement men who had just begun to take an interest in the cause come to hate the name of prohibition, because it them it seemed an attempt to destroy a party and not the rum traffic. Lakeworth friends went over to the other side and worked against prohibition. The band of Christian unity and sympathy between women so complete ten years ago was also lost and division created which could not separate the workers to a certain degree. Those on the non-partisan side believe that women must do the foundation work in making public sentiment. The prohibitory law is a good thing and when its weight is fully realized it will be obeyed. Our foreign population needs to be taught and educated to the standard aimed at, that they may receive the light and the truth. A better day is coming when the people will have reached that point of conviction which will cause them to rise up and exterminate this curse forever.

The close attention that was paid to the words of the speaker was an evidence that the sentiments expressed did not fall upon barren soil, and that the argument was a most convincing one.

WILL FOR THE PAPER.

That the Gray Already Shipped—Sheet One Hundred Thousand Pounds Wanted.

In conversation with one of the leading tie dealers on the river, yesterday, THE WHIG representative was informed that the total amount of the crystal product of Maine winters remaining unsold on the river, stream and ponds about here is from ninety to one hundred thousand tons. The total amount still unshipped is about 250,000 tons, or about one half the total ice crop.

Ice sells readily at $4.50 per ton, but not many dealers care to dispose of their product at that price, as they prefer to hold on for a higher figure later in the year. Ice is being quite rapidly shipped to many points South, giving employment to a large number of men during the season. Vessels remain in the harbor only a short time, as just as soon as their cargoes are discharged they are rapidly filled up with ice and started South.

The rum which has been and will be realized from last winter's harvest will be very large. The dealers expect that the market price of ice will advance materially in a few months and are in no hurry to sell at present as they have good houses where ice will keep for a long time without injury.

Amusement Notes.

The excellent attraction "The Two Sisters," will, at last season, open its season in this city on August 25th, and it will doubtless be welcomed by the large audiences which greeted it before when it was presented by a very strong company, which included Fraser Coulter. The members of the company will arrive here a short time before the date appointed for the performance and begin rehearsals at the Opera House. Many of the same people will be in the cast this year, that made the company such a good one last season. The company had a long season before it.

One of the prominent attractions to come to the Opera House early this season is "The Dark Secret," which will be remembered by our theatre goers as a sensational drama of great interest. The "dark" scene is one of its features. The company will include some the same people as upon the former representation in this city.

There is talk among the amateur actors of this city of giving "The Lady of Lyons" sometime during the coming fall, and it is probable that the talk will go into effect.

The two fore and aft compound engines and the boiler is from the McKinnon Iron Works. The hull is made from the best white oak and her lines are very graceful. She will steam fifteen miles per hour. On her start from Cleveland she made 136 miles in ten hours. Capt. True will bring her by the way of Lakes Erie and Ontario, the Erie canal and the Hudson river.

He was found by two Odd Fellows, to which society he belonged, and he was identified by an Odd Fellows' pin which he wore. About two hours after finding the body of Fred Griindle the body of Melvin Griindle was found on the shore of Jones Turner, at Castine.

Different Gun. Match.

We were shown yesterday by Col A. C. Hamlin a photograph, he had just received, of a handsome monument, lately erected to the memory of Gen. Edward Hatch, formerly of this city and a distinguished cavalry officer. The monument is appropriately designed and of fine workmanship and is erected in the burial ground at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas On one side is the inscription. "Edward Hatch, Colonel Ninth Cavalry, Brevet Major General, U. S. A. Born in Bangor, Me., Dec. 22, 1833. Died at Fort Robinson, Neb., April 11, 1889" On another side are inscribed the names of battles in which he engaged and on which he distinguished himself for his fearless and gallantry The monument was, to the the inscription, "erected by the officers and enlisted men of the Ninth Cavalry, U. S. A., in token of their esteem for one who was their friend and commander for twenty-three years." Gen. Hatch was one of the most distinguished soldiers who went from this city and will be well remembered by many people in this city. He had always served in the West. Of him Gen. Thomas once said "He never knew when to stop fighting." Gen. Hatch formerly lived on Court street in this city and had many warm friends here.

Nature should be assisted in the spring to throw off the heaviness of the sluggish winter circulation of the blood. Nothing does it so well, so prompt or so safely as Swift's Specific.

I have used S. S. S. for a number of years, and consider it the best tonic and blood remedy that I ever used. In fact, I would not attempt to enter upon a spring or summer in this climate without it. H. W. COLEMAN, Of Coleman, Ferguson & Co., Dade City, Fla.

Tales Of Sin!

By WILLIAM HENRY BISHOP.

[Copyrighted by J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia, and published through special arrangement with them.]

"Ah, ha! Well, I'll take a look into the baggage of these wolfkins—at your risk, do you understand; if I find you have been deceiving me it will be worse for you. Just now, you observe, I have other things to do."

"But they are only just behind me. I hurried on in advance to warn you. They may get off with their plunder, if you do not look well to it."

As the junction of the main road with that to Las Delicias and the mountain path, by a group of roofless buildings, the vestiges of a country house ruined in former wars. Fortunately for Senor Corcovedo, who could not fully make up his mind to change his part of going to play the ruffian and tyrant as the hacienda, the small cortege of the del Prado family was approaching, and already near this point. Corcovedo drew up his force across the road and intercepted them.

Almost at the same moment Capt. Perez dashed up, on his way to rejoin Walter. This was the first semblance of danger he had fallen in with, but he felt it might have been much worse when he came to learn the intention of the Jefe Politico. Though he had no great interest in Gen. del Prado, he had not a little in Amy on Walter's account. With an insinuating, politic way he well knew how to employ at need, he begged to offer his mediation, but this Senor Corcovedo brusquely rejected.

"I demand your passport," he had said, roughly, to the general, on halting him.

"My passport? What need have I of a passport, who am so well known to you?"

"I have received orders that all persons travelling without passports are to be arrested, and the laws concerning conspiracy applied to them."

"Such a law was indeed talked of while I was at Mexico, but it has never been published here. In any event, such laws are not for me," rejoined the general, haughtily.

"We will see about that. I will hold you as my prisoner for intermpting to leave this district without authority."

With what ineffable contempt he hurled his curses at Senor Corcovedo, this place's petty man who had once aspired to call himself chief!

"But I am an American citizen, and Gen. del Prado has only sought out to place me under the protection of the minister of my country. I demand that we shall not be interrupted," interposed Amy, astonished at his own temerity.

"Oh, very well; I have no means of knowing about that, but I suppose we may take your word for it," responded the Jefe, sneeringly. "You may go on by yourself."

But now the head of an irregular column of market people was seen coming down the mountain path. There seemed an unusual number of women among them, dressed in the Egyptian like blue rebozo and skirt. The foremost ones came swiftly on, making little of their burdens, as their way is, and the soldiers opened slightly to let them pass through. Don Walter appeared riding only as it with and not of them. The real and false market people were mingled together.

A whistle was heard and nearly all stopped where they were. No great number had yet come in sight. Capt. Perez dreaded the ill effect on Walter of the situation of affairs, and he pushed overtowards him to counsel prudence.

"Surely there can be no reason for detaining or annoying these friends from the hacienda of Las Delicias," said Walter to the Jefe; "there must be some mistake here."

"Oh, of course, we shall account for it to you at leisure. Meanwhile you are my prisoner, too," presenting a revolver at his head.

"If your prisoner! he returned, calmly, thrilled through every fiber with a sense of the danger, yet desirous to retain his utmost coolness on account of the vastness of the interests at stake "and pray on what account?"

"You are charged with converting the public domain to your own use; and I demand an account of what your followers here are taking away."

He had signaled to a part of his men to guard the first prisoners and to the rest to close up around himself. The two groups were not a little mixed together. At the sight of the pistol aimed at Walter, Amy Colebrook, whose anxious eye had been upon all his, was so wrought upon by an intensity of dread that she gave utterance to a most piercing feminine shriek. She saw, note only the personal danger of her lover, but the ruin impending over his grand project. So penetrated with exquisite agony was this shriek, so vivid and startling, that it irresistibly drew the attention of every one.

In this instant of diversion, while the eyes of the Jefe Politico involuntarily turned with the rest, a figure whirlingly peared to be a woman, but was in reality Trinidad Joss, sprang swiftly upon him, caught his extended arm, and dragged him down from the saddle. Capt. Perez at the same time made his broad breasted charger wheel and plunge roughly among the crowd, and cried in a stentorian voice:

"A mistake! a mistake. Stand back! do not fire! Some mistake is here!"

"Pin him, Corcovedo! pin him, boy!" called Trinidad Joss; and the dog devoted himself with a gusto to helping at last a sweet, long deferred vengeance.

The men, disorganized by the fall of their chief and the cry of Perez, knew not at first what to do. But they were regulars, and soon recovered their equanimity. They fired at Joss and his dog—though both miraculously escaped unhurt—set the Jefe again on his horse, then formed in good order and sent a telling volley after the scattering peasants. They began to follow them, but soon, realizing that discretion was the better part of valor, they retired to the ruined country house, still keeping the del Prado family as prisoners.

A loud, shrill call summoned into sight a much larger force of the peasants. Pipes in disguise threw off their women's costumes, and all prepared for the attack. In the midst some shouts for the liberator had inadvertently been raised; the war cry was thus heard, and the movement identified henceforth with that of the revolution.

"The campaign has begun," commented Perez, philosophically. "Very well, it can't be helped; we are in for it, and we'll take the consequences."

It was clearly necessary, in the sequel, that they should retreat, but they determined first to cripple the enemy, to prevent a too speedy pursuit. Still more important in Walter's eyes was the rescuing of the prisoners. A plan of attack was quickly arranged; one body was to advance along the road, another to make a feint in flank, while a third should steal round under cover of a thick field of bananas and take the enemy in the rear. But these latter were no novices in this kind of warfare, and, as without the help of artillery every adobe wall may become a redoubt, they mostly held their own. It was not till another force under young Don Angel—who had been notified at the hacienda of what was going on—came hurrying and yelling across the fields that they finally gave up. They broke from their intrenchments and fled in wild confusion, with much loss.

Amy Colebrook had a brief glimpse of Walter under a guise in which it is rarely given to women to see their heroes. She hardly knew him, and was almost afraid of him. The rage of battle was still upon him, he was bleeding from a slight bullet wound across the cheek, and a revolver smoked in his hand. He was bursting in a gate at the head of a storming party when the enemy took to flight.

But this in no way interfered with his affectionate consideration for her. He was inclined to retire from view, as if his appearance were an offense against etiquette. He quickly detailed Capt. Perez to guard the general's party to Rio Frio, leaving him, Don Walter, to his own resources. Perez strongly expostulated at this, but the other would not be gainsaid.

"Go at once" insisted Walter, almost imperiously. "They must be conveyed to a place of safety. Now that they are supposed to be detained with the insurrection, there is something what penalties they would suffer if captured. You are light, and can keep the start you have got."

"And you?"

"We shall retire by the pass again to the Barranca, and go out by Lake Jocuala. Be sure you see we have some boats and what ammunition can spare available there. I shall consider every inch of the way it necessary, before, know our route better than they do now, and, heavily loaded as we are, no other would be possible."

Meanwhile, all the bells in the town pealed out a hoarse and jangling alarm, the shops and churches were closed, and good citizens barred their doors at the bursting of this sudden war cloud.

The Jefe Politico had been within an ace of capture himself, he certainly could not have escaped if his opponents had had but a little more time to follow. He was furious with rage and choked with chagrin at the ignominious fate that had befallen him, and yet, inspired with a salutary dread, too, by the lesson he had received, he made none too active preparations to avenge himself.

But Pablo thrust under his nose some specimens from one of the bags of treasure that fell during the flight.

"See here," he said, "this is the kind of stuff they picked up at the Barranca; it ought to be good enough for us. Better give the thing a systematic trial for awhile."

Truth that momentous was no question either of pursuing Gen. del Prado or of attacking—just yet—Las Delicias. He gathered his whole force, and set out in hot chase after Don Walter, fired by the keenest zest for plunder.

The Magazines.

PETERSON for August is a very attractive number. The opening story, Ned, is one of the brightest summer sketches. Imprisoned Rainbows is the second of a series of papers on precious stones, and is full of useful information. Alice Maud Ewell begins Jackey and the Princess, a charming novelette of Virginia life, and, in the Earl's keeping, by Georgia Grant, promises to be an equally interesting story with English scenery and characters. Among the other stories are Under an Unlucky Star, by H. A. Holden; Between the Two, by Frank Lee Benedict, and Story of an Old Letter, by Olivia Lovell Wilson, all of them thoroughly bright and entertaining. The Superintendent of the Newport hospital gives a paper on Cholera, a capitally written and timely contribution. Terms, Two dollars a year; One dollar for six months. Address, Peterson's Magazine, Philadelphia, Pa.

For several years WIDE AWAKE has from time to time given some beautiful stories of a highly fanciful nature from the pen of Miss Mary E. Wilkins; one of the best appears in the August number, entitled The Princess Rosetta and the Pop-Corn Man, with seven illustrations by Garrett. Another charmingly fanciful story in the same number is by Susan Coolidge and is called Three Little Candles. As a contrast come The Hat of the Postmaster, another Nassau story by Mrs. Fremont, Cy Hope's Victory, the story of a Canadian Indian boy at school, by H. C. Chipman, and Miss McLeod's Acadian tale, The Story of Bloody Creek. Perhaps one of the best things in the number is a short paper by Louisa Stockton, A Game of the Seasons," in which she suggests the development possible to the scenes through the using of them. The helpful article is by Mrs. Sallie Joy White, on The Visiting Member, though the small girl of the household may prefer Home-made Furniture for Doll Houses by Mrs. Shapleigh. There is a fascinating group of Lily articles: The American Water Lily by Grant Allen; The Queen Lily by Amanda B. Harris, and a poem, Water Lilies, by Frances L. Mace. The last of the Wampanoags by Pamela McArthur Cole, gives an account of a family directly descended from Massasoit, that lives a Lakeville, Mass., with the portrait of the Princess Tewelema. The Confessions of an Amateur Photographer, by Alexander Black relates to Dark Deeds; the photograph, A Lake Party, by Prof. Newton, is very beautiful. A delightful illustrated literary paper is contributed by Mrs. Frances A. Humphrey, entitled Early Days of Lady Anne Lindsay, the author of Auld Robin Gray. Mr. Ward's Serial, The New Schoolmaster at Andover, which is attracting so much attention, is well worthy the interest it excites; while the extravaganza, The Quest of the Whipping Boy, is good light reading. Men and Things as usual gives good original anecdotes and talks, and the Margaret-Patty Letter is worth the while of young people who are careless of grammar and spelling in conversation and letter writing. The Prize Anagram, The Perplexities of a Crymangle, is translated in this number.

Wide Awake is $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston, Mass.
